2005-06 Washington State Tuition and Fee Report

Executive Summary

Background

State law directs the Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) to recommend state tuition and fee policies to the governor and Legislature. As part of its analysis, board staff conduct an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington state tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other western states. In addition, staff examine how tuition and fees at individual Washington institutions contrast with tuition and fees charged by comparable institutions nationwide. These comparable institutions are referred to as “peer” institutions throughout this report. The following are key findings from this year’s tuition and fee report.

Key Findings

Nationally, tuition increased 8.3 percent for research institutions, 6.9 percent for comprehensive institutions, and 7.0 percent for community colleges.

- Washington resident undergraduates pay less than the national average for tuition at the four-year institutions.
  - The University of Washington (UW) and Washington State University (WSU) continue to fall below the national average by about 10 percent.
  - Washington comprehensive institutions are 14 percent below the national average.
- At the community colleges, Washington residents pay slightly less than the national average.
  - Washington community colleges rank 23rd out of 49 states, i.e., 23 states ranked at or below Washington community college tuition, and 26 ranked above.

- The differences between Washington and “average” tuition and fee rates are more pronounced among comparable (peer) institutions.
  - UW and WSU are below their peer averages by 23 percent and 14 percent, respectively, for resident undergraduate tuition and fees.
- Resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates in Washington are higher than in most western states.
  - UW and WSU are the second highest among the western (WICHE) states for resident undergraduate tuition and fees. Washington comprehensives and the community colleges rank sixth and fifth, respectively, among the western states.
- Washington’s rank in tuition levels among all states and peer institutions has remained steady. For example, UW nationally ranked 25th in 2002 and ranks 26th today.
  - Washington comprehensive institutions ranked 28th in 2002 and rank 32nd today, while the community colleges ranked 24th in 2002 and rank 23rd today.
- Over the last 10 years, tuition and fees have increased 82 percent at the University of Washington. The national average of tuition and fees increased 94 percent over the same period.

2005-06 Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees

Institutions	Tuition and Fees
Research Institutions:
University of Washington - Seattle	$5,505
Washington State University – All Campuses	$5,506
Comprehensive Institutions:
Central Washington University	$4,219
Eastern Washington University	$4,149
Western Washington University	$4,165
The Evergreen State College	$4,130
Community Colleges	$2,445

The tables on the following page show Washington’s ranking nationally, as well as by respective peer group for each institution or sector, and for the western states, i.e., the 15 states that participate in the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE).

It should be noted that Washington State University is compared with the national flagship universities in the following tables. But in the tuition and fee survey, only the University of Washington is represented in Tables 1 through 4 as Washington's flagship university. Detailed tuition and fee data for WSU and its peer institutions are contained in Peer Tables 5 through 8 and 15 and 16.

*49-state average serves as the peer group for the community colleges (South Dakota has no community colleges).

Note: Tuition includes operating and building fee, plus mandatory fees.

Washington's Tuition and Fee Increases Over Time

Nationally, the flagship universities saw tuition increases that averaged 8.3 percent for resident undergraduates. This was down from an increase of 9.2 percent in 2004-05 and 11.2 percent in 2003-04. Resident undergraduate students at the University of Washington saw their tuition increase 6.3 percent in 2005-06. This reflects the third year of consistent tuition increases of about 6.5 percent.

The comprehensive colleges and universities nationwide have seen similar increases in tuition and fees as the national flagship universities. However, this year's average increase was less at the comprehensives than at the flagship universities (6.9 percent versus 8.3 percent). Similar to increases in resident undergraduate tuition for students at the University of Washington, resident undergraduate tuition increases for Washington's comprehensive colleges and universities have steadily grown between 5.8 and 6.7 percent over the last three years.

Nationally, state averages for resident tuition and fees at community colleges increased 7 percent. This is a decline from the prior two-year national increases of 8 percent and 8.9 percent. Students at Washington community colleges saw a 5.7 percent increase this year, compared to 8 percent in 2004-05 and 8.1 percent in 2003-04.

Other Tuition Categories

Unlimited tuition-setting authority for tuition categories other than resident undergraduates was granted by the 2003 Legislature for six years, beginning in 2003-04. Tuition and fee increases in those categories are varied, but generally show Washington tuition increasing at a slower rate than the national average for nonresident undergraduates and resident and nonresident graduates.

One exception is the University of Washington. This year, for example, tuition and fees have increased 11.2 percent for nonresident undergraduates, compared to a national increase of 7.4 percent. At the same time, resident graduate tuition increased 8.3 percent, versus 7.5 percent nationally. In both tuition categories, however, tuition and fees at the UW are very close to the average of their peer institutions.

Professional tuition and fees (resident/nonresident medical, veterinary medicine, dental, and law) at both the University of Washington and Washington State University increased at a range of 8.9 percent to 9.7 percent, while their respective peer groups increased 4.6 percent to 13.8 percent for these tuition categories. These tuition increases reflect institutional efforts to bring professional tuition rates closer to peer averages.

The tuition amounts reported for Washington institutions, as well as nationally, reflect total tuition and required fees at the institutions. In Washington, because institutions may increase required fees at rates that are less than those authorized by the Legislature, these percentages vary from the authorized amount. In the community college system, tuition is now based on a per-credit hour charge. The percentages reported in this publication reflect the tuition and fee amount paid by a student taking 15 credit hours per term. In all sectors – research, comprehensive, and community colleges – tuition (operating and building fee) increased at the maximum amount authorized by the Legislature; 7 percent at the research universities, 6 percent at the comprehensive institutions, and 5 percent at the community and colleges. For community colleges, the average tuition increased by the authorized 5 percent.

During the last decade, the increase in Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fees has outpaced both Washington per capita personal income (PCPI) and inflation. Since 1995-96, tuition and fees have increased 82 percent at the University of Washington (for resident undergraduates), while the state's PCPI has increased 40 percent. The growth in the rate of inflation (22 percent) continues to lag behind both tuition and the PCPI.

2005-06 Washington State Tuition and Fee Report

Chapter 1: 2005-06 Washington State Tuition and Fees

As part of its yearly analysis of tuition and fees, Higher Education Coordinating Board staff conduct an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington state tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other western states. In addition, staff examine how tuition and fees at individual Washington institutions compare with tuition and fees charged by their respective “peer” institutions.

In 1988, a joint legislative and executive study group, in consultation with the HECB, adopted a national comparison “peer” group for each of the following: (1) the University of Washington (flagship universities); (2) Washington State University; (3) comprehensive institutions – which include Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities; (4) The Evergreen State College; and (5) the Washington community college system. For a more detailed description of the peer group selection, see page 14.

Undergraduate tuition and fees for comprehensive institutions are based on data from 214 public colleges and universities. Graduate tuition and fees are based on data from the same group of public colleges and universities, although not all offer graduate programs. Required fees are fees paid by all full-time students and do not include any optional fees – such as parking or health care – unless they are paid by all full-time students.

Following is a summary of how 2005-06 tuition and fees at Washington colleges and universities compare with those in all 50 states, in other western states, and at peer institutions.

National Comparison

To better understand how Washington tuition and fee rates compare nationally, HECB staff looked at three categories: (1) flagship universities; (2) comprehensive colleges and state universities; and (3) community colleges. The following summary tables provide an overview of the relationship between tuition and fee rates at Washington colleges and universities and national averages. Tables also graph this year’s increases in resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates for each state.

For more detailed analysis by category and a national perspective over the last five years, see the tables in Section IV (National Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 4 represent tuition and fee rates at the public flagship university in each state.

Tables 5 through 8 represent the average tuition and fees for a selected set of comprehensive colleges and universities in all 50 states. Washington institutions represented in this sector include Central Washington University, Eastern Washington University, and Western Washington University. (The Evergreen State College is compared with its own set of peer institutions in Peer Tables 17 through 20. It is presented in the following table for comparison to the comprehensive peer group).

The comprehensive colleges and universities peer group, created in 1969, is comprised of 214 institutions reporting undergraduate tuition and fees. In addition, 192 of those institutions report graduate tuition and fees. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time with the same set of institutions offer consistency, while the large number of institutions provides a close approximation of state averages. Tables 9 and 10 display state averages for community colleges.

Note: The governor and 2005 Legislature authorized tuition increases of up to 7 percent for all resident undergraduate students at the research institutions, 6 percent at the comprehensive institutions, and 5 percent at the community and technical colleges. Governing boards and the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges continue to have authority to set tuition rates for all students other than resident undergraduates. The percentage increase in the table above reflects the actual annual increase in total tuition and fees (building, operating, services and activities fees, and technology). Services and activities fees and technology fees may not always increase at the same rate as "tuition," i.e., operating and building fee. See "Washington's Tuition and Fee Structure" (page 18) for a more complete description.

2005-06 Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees

Research Institutions

University of Washington (flagship):

- The University of Washington ranks 26th nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates. (The state with the highest tuition and fees would rank number 1.)
  - The UW increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 6.3 percent in 2005-06; the national average increased 8.3 percent.
  - In 2004-05, 21 states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more. This year (2005-06), 14 states raised tuition and fees by 10 percent or more.
  - Both California and Texas increased tuition and fees more than 20 percent, and four states increased tuition and fees three percent or less.

Note: UW is considered the “flagship” university and is used for the national flagship university comparison in the tuition survey. Tuition and fees for WSU are reported in the Peer Tables 5 through 8 and 15 and 16.

Washington State University:

- Washington State University also ranks 26th nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates when compared to the national flagship universities.
  - WSU increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 6.8 percent in 2005-06; the national average increased 8.3 percent.

Comprehensive Institutions (Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities)

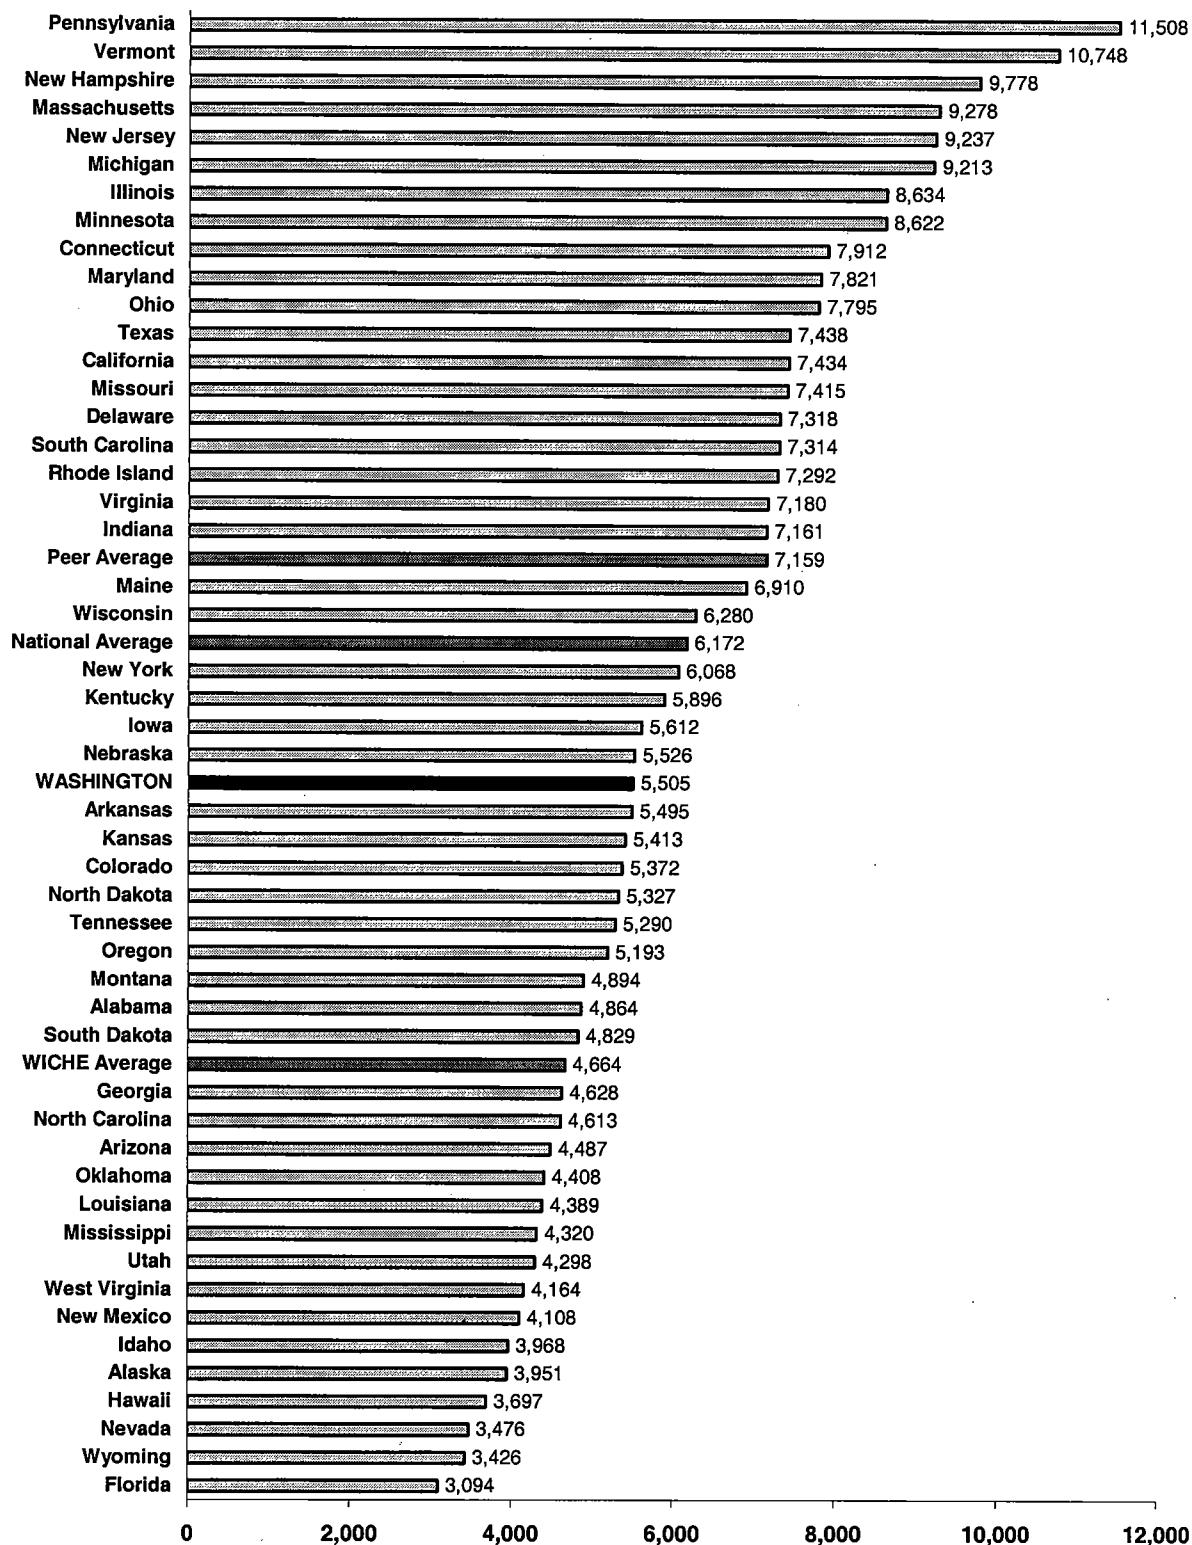

- Washington’s comprehensive institutions rank 32nd nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates.
- Washington comprehensive institutions increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 5.8 percent in 2005-06; the national average increased 6.9 percent.
- Sizeable increases in tuition and fees appear to have slowed for comprehensive institutions across the nation. In 2005-06, six states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more, compared to 15 states in 2004-05 and 27 states in 2003-04.
- Five states increased tuition and fees 3 percent or less in 2005-06.
- The Evergreen State College ranks comparably if compared to the comprehensive institutions nationally. Evergreen’s peer data is offered in Peer Tables 17 through 20.

Washington's Community Colleges

- Washington's community colleges rank 23rd nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates.
- Washington community colleges increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 5.7 percent in 2005-06; the national average increased 7 percent.
- In 2005-06, six states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more, compared to 15 states in 2004-05.
- Two states increased tuition and fees more than 20 percent. Five states increased tuition and fees 3 percent or less; two of those had no increase.

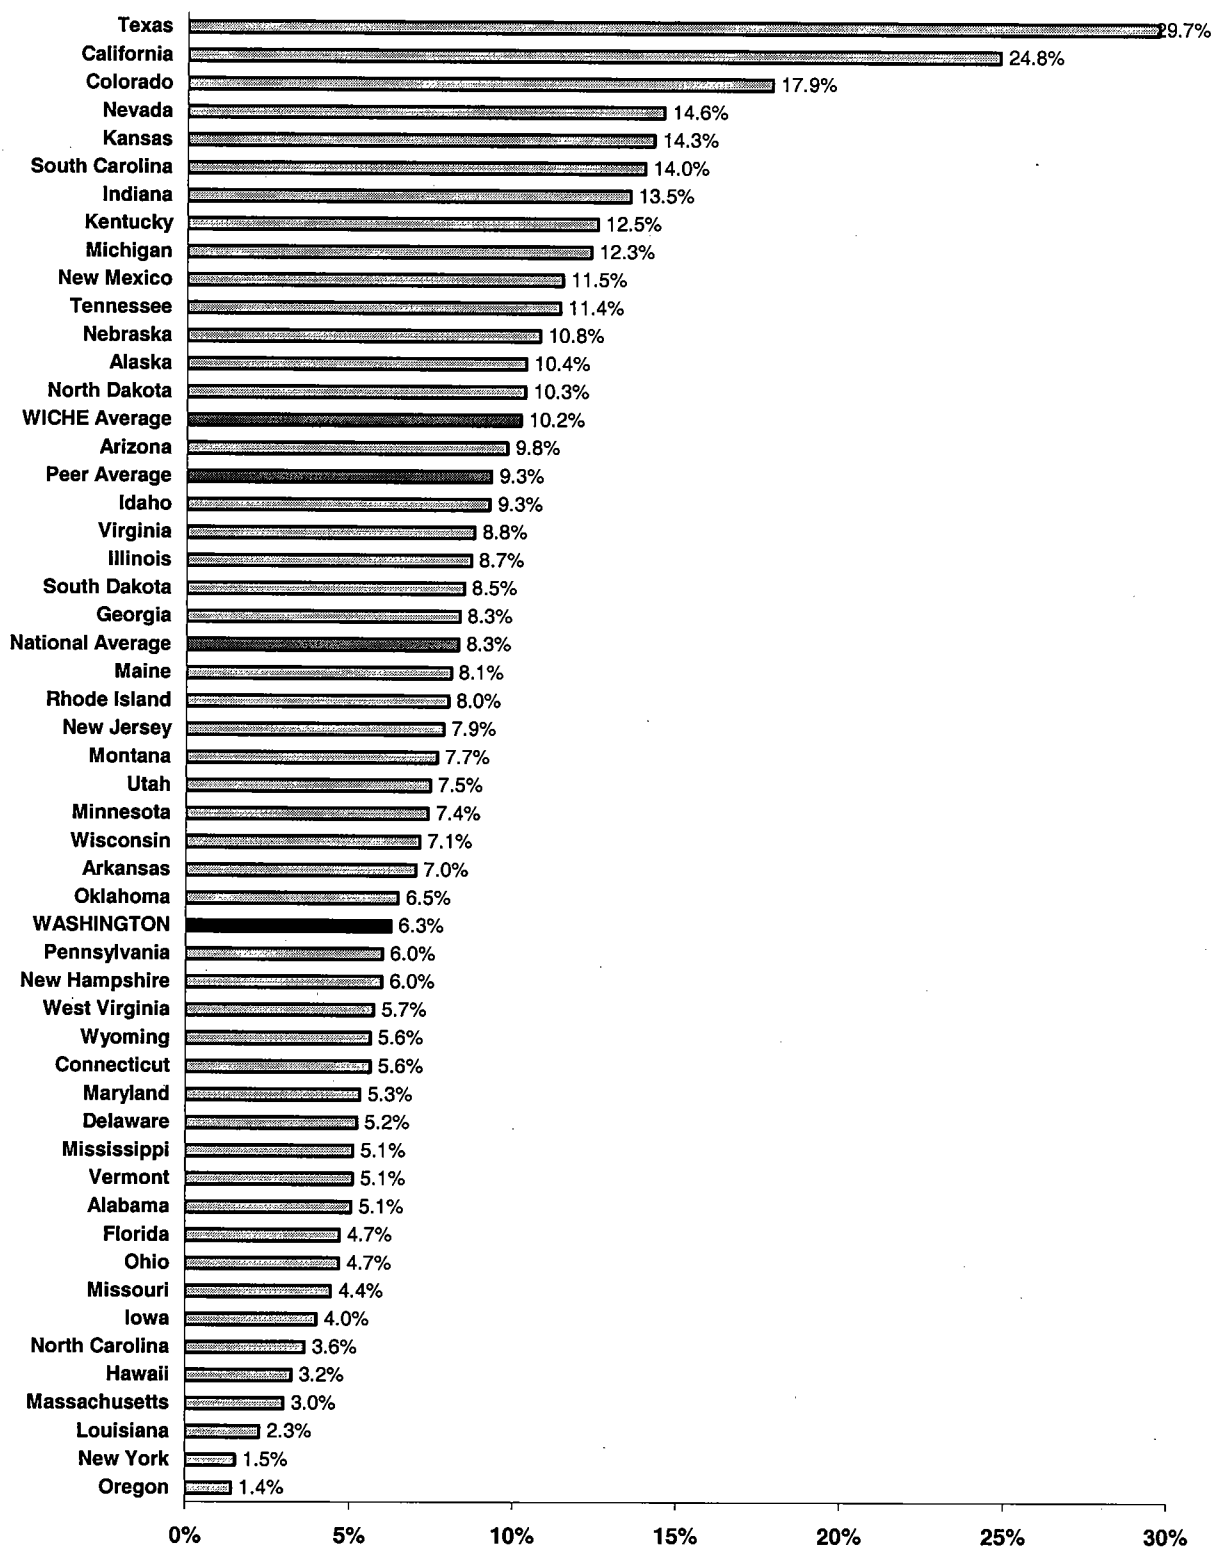

The following charts display Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates for 2005-06 by sector (research [flagship], comprehensive, and the community colleges) as compared to other states nationwide. Also displayed by sector are the state rankings by percentage increases in tuition and fees as reported in this year's tuition and fee survey. For more information on the WICHE and peer averages, refer to pages 13 through 17.

Western States Comparison

HECB staff compared tuition and fees at Washington public colleges and universities with those at public colleges and universities in 14 other western states. Like Washington, these states are members of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE). They include Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

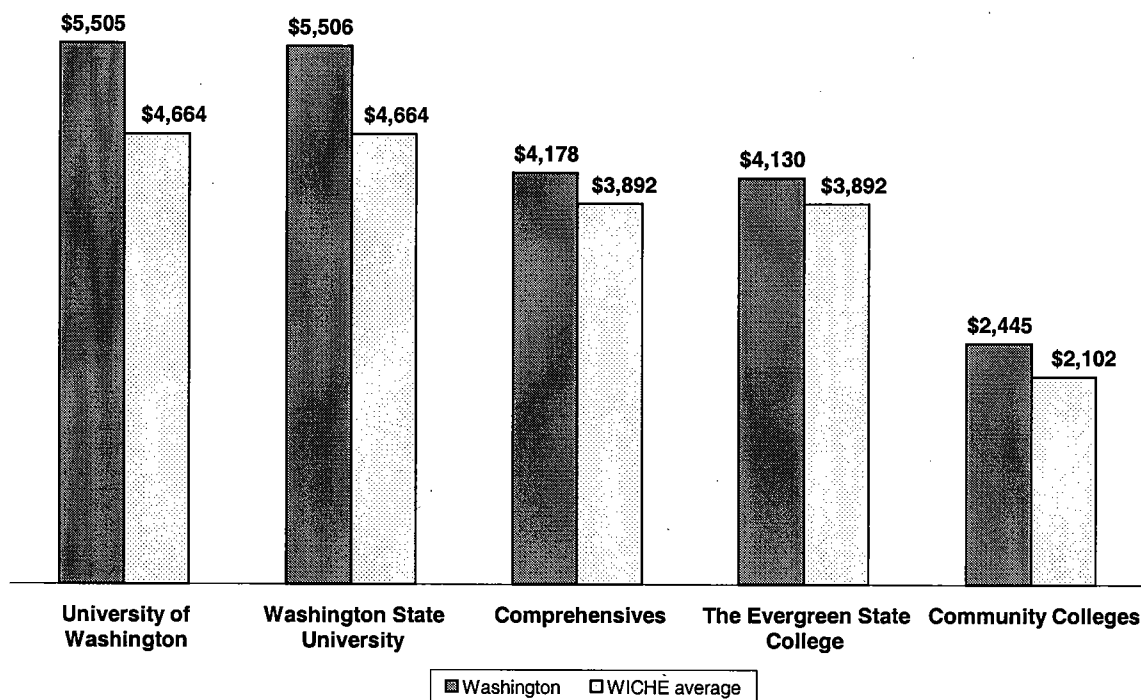

The summary table and graph that follow compare Washington tuition and fee rates with those of other WICHE states. Please note that the comprehensive institutions include Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities. The Evergreen State College (TESC) is represented within its own peer group and, consequently, is represented in the Peer Institution Comparison section. TESC is presented separately in the graph on the following page.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV of this report (WICHE States Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 8 display historical and current tuition and required fee rates for full-time undergraduate and graduate students at public four-year colleges and universities in the western states. Tables 9 and 10 display the average tuition and fee rates for community colleges in each western state.

Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees Washington Compared to WICHE States 2005-06

Peer Institution Comparison

In 1988, the HECB undertook a study to develop peer groups reflecting a national perspective. Concurrently, a special joint legislative and executive study group was appointed to review the higher education master plan funding recommendations, with peer comparison groups identified as one of its areas of study. The joint study group and the HECB worked together and adopted the following peer policies:

1. The Carnegie Commission's classification of institutions is used as the basis for selecting comparison groups for Washington institutions of higher education.
2. The national comparison group for the University of Washington is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Research Universities Category I with medical schools. These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs and are committed to graduate education through the doctorate level.
3. The national comparison group for Washington State University is all public land grant universities in the Carnegie classification Research Universities Categories I and

II with veterinary schools. Research Category II differs from Category I in the number of doctoral degrees offered.

4. The national comparison group for Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Comprehensive Colleges and Universities Category I. These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs and are committed to graduate education through the master's degree.
5. The national comparison group for the Washington community college system is all state community colleges.

In 1990, the HECB adopted a peer group for The Evergreen State College using the Carnegie Commission classification of institutions. The board screened a composite category of public institutions in the Comprehensive I and Liberal Arts II classification. (Institutions in the Liberal Arts II classification are primarily undergraduate colleges with major emphasis on baccalaureate programs.) The selected peer institutions were also based on size, similarities of degrees awarded, and other characteristics common to The Evergreen State College.

The summary table on the following page shows tuition and fee rates at Washington public colleges and universities compared to those of their respective peer groups.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV of this report. Peer Tables 1 through 20 display peer groups for the University of Washington, Washington State University, and The Evergreen State College. Peer groups for Washington comprehensive institutions, with the exception of The Evergreen State College, are represented in National Tables 5 through 8. Washington community colleges are represented in National Tables 9 and 10.

Also included in the peer comparison section (Peer Tables 9 through 16) are tuition and fee data for the University of Washington's professional medical, dental, and law programs. Tables 15 and 16 display veterinary medicine tuition and fee rates for Washington State University and its national peer group.

Chapter 2: Washington's Tuition and Fee Structure

Components of Tuition and Fees

Often the phrase “tuition and fees” is used to refer to the charges that all students pay to attend a college or university. At Washington colleges and universities, tuition and fees include operating fees, building fees, services and activities fees, and technology fees. The actual “tuition” portion, as outlined in statute, includes operating fees and building fees.

Operating Fee

The operating fee represents 80 to 95 percent of tuition and fees and primarily funds the institution's instructional activities.

Building Fee

The building fee, which comprises 3 to 10 percent of tuition and fees, is used to fund building projects and retire bonds. Previously, the building fee portion of tuition was a fixed dollar amount set in statute. While operating fees increased, the building fee did not. Legislative changes in 1993 provided for increases in the amount of tuition that is dedicated to building fees. In 1995-96, the building fee became a percentage of total tuition and fees rather than a fixed amount and, consequently, increased as overall tuition increased.<sup>1</sup>

Services and Activities Fee

The services and activities fee (S&A), which represents 2 to 12 percent of tuition and fees, funds non-instructional student activities and programs – including some bond repayments for student-support facilities. S&A fees may increase each year if the services and activities fee committee at an institution initiates a request. The S&A rate increases may not exceed tuition rate increases for resident undergraduate students.<sup>2</sup>

Technology Fee

In 1996, the Legislature also authorized the public four-year institutions to impose technology fees of up to $120 per year. Four institutions now charge this fee: the University of Washington, Western Washington University, Central Washington University, and Eastern Washington University. Although capped at $120, the technology fee may be adjusted or abolished with approval of the school's student government association and the institutional governing board.<sup>3</sup> Currently, this fee represents less than 3 percent of total tuition and fees.

The table on the following page illustrates the various fees for resident undergraduates. Nonresident tuition and fees – for students who are not residents of Washington – are considerably higher.

Comparison of Tuition to the Total Cost of Instruction

Washington public colleges and universities receive resources for instruction from two primary sources: operating fee revenue (tuition) and the State General Fund. Therefore, the tuition paid by an individual student covers only a portion of the total cost incurred by colleges and universities to provide the instructional program for each student. Prior to 1995, tuition was charged as a specified percentage of the total cost of instruction. Since 1995, tuition has been set without specific reference to the total cost of instruction.

For an undergraduate student, the following table shows the proportion of costs covered by tuition. In the current 2005-06 academic year, resident tuition makes up approximately 40 percent of the cost at comprehensive institutions and over 37 percent of the cost at community colleges. Nearly 52 percent of the cost of instruction is paid by tuition at research universities. (The remaining portion of costs are covered primarily by the State General Fund, i.e., from state taxes.) Tuition for nonresident undergraduates covers the entire cost of instruction.

Total Amount of Tuition Revenue Generated

In fiscal year 2005-06, institutions will receive about $626 million from tuition. In comparison, institutions will receive approximately $1.383 billion from the State General Fund.<sup>4</sup>

Tuition at Washington's Technical Colleges

In 1991, Washington's technical colleges merged with the community college system. Although the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges (SBCTC) now oversees both the technical and community colleges, the two types of schools set tuition differently. Following the merger, a SBCTC task force reviewed the tuition process and recommended, with SBCTC approval, that tuition responsibility for the technical colleges remain at the local level. Technical colleges (and the Seattle Vocational Institute) set tuition and retain it in local accounts. The task force determined that this method provides significant flexibility and allows the colleges to make decisions based on local needs.

Each technical college sets tuition locally, based on program costs and market influences. Tuition rates are generally comparable across the technical colleges for similar programs and are comparable to rates at community colleges.

Chapter 3: Tuition History in Washington State

Historical Overview

1977-1995: Legislature Links Tuition Rates to the Cost of Instruction

Between 1977 and 1995, the Legislature established tuition rates as a percentage of the cost of instruction. In 1977, when this approach was enacted by the Legislature, a Carnegie Commission study, Who Pays? Who Benefits? Who Should Pay? determined that, nationally, tuition covered 24 percent of the cost of instruction at public higher education institutions. The commission recommended that this proportion be increased to 33 percent within 10 years.

Under this “cost-sharing” approach, the student contributed a specified portion of the cost and the state provided the remainder. Cost-sharing assumes that both the student and society benefit from having an educated and productive citizenry.

To determine undergraduate and graduate instructional costs, the Legislature directed the HECB to develop and perform a cost study every four years.<sup>5</sup> Using cost study data, the HECB transmitted to the institutions the cost basis upon which tuition would be established.

1995-1999: Legislature Sets Tuition in Statute

In 1995, the Legislature removed the direct link to the cost of instruction and instead set tuition in statute as dollar amounts for each public institution. Although 1995 legislative intent stated that the tuition increases of 1995-96 and 1996-97 were a “transition measure until final action is taken in 1997,”<sup>6</sup> the practice of specifying dollar amounts was continued through the 1997-99 biennium.

Tuition amounts (or percentage increases) specified in statute have referred only to the “tuition” portion of tuition and fees. Public colleges and universities may assess additional fees – such as services and activities fees and technology fees. State statutes establish maximum amounts that can be charged for these additional fees, which vary by institution.

The Legislature also directed the HECB to continue to conduct the cost study and submit “approved undergraduate and graduate educational costs to the several boards of regents and trustees of the state institutions of higher education by November 10 of each even-numbered year....”<sup>7</sup>

1999-2001: Legislature Gives Limited Tuition-Setting Authority to Institutions

For the first time, in academic year 1999-2000, the Legislature and governor gave institutions limited local tuition-setting authority. The 1999-2001 State Operating Budget authorized colleges and universities to increase tuition up to 4.6 percent in the 1999-2000 academic year and 3.6 percent in the 2000-2001 academic year.

2001-2002 academic year: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority Continues for Institutions

The Legislature and governor continued to give institutions limited local tuition-setting authority in academic year 2001-2002, with tuition increases authorized up to 6.7 percent. However, maximum tuition increases for graduate programs of law and business were set at 12 percent, and the University of Washington was allowed to increase tuition up to 15 percent for its graduate business programs.

2002-2003 academic year: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority for Resident Undergraduates, other categories unlimited

Institutions were allowed specified maximum percentage increases (above the prior year's tuition) for resident undergraduates, as follows:

Research Universities (UW and WSU)	16%
Comprehensive Institutions (CWU, EWU, TESC, WWU)	14%
Community Colleges	12%

These increases were among the highest for any year in the previous decade. And, in all cases, the institutions found it necessary to raise tuition to the allowable maximum.

For other student categories – graduate and professional students and all nonresident students – no maximum was placed on allowable tuition increases.

In 2002-2003, Washington's community colleges changed the basis of tuition from a full-time/part-time basis to a per-credit hour base. Tuition and fees reported here reflect the amount charged to a student taking 15 credit hours per term.

2003-2005 biennium: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority up to 7 Percent for Resident Undergraduates, other categories unlimited

For six years (2003-2004 through 2008-2009), institutions may reduce or increase full-time tuition for all students except resident undergraduates. Increases may exceed the fiscal growth factor (ESSB 5448).

For resident undergraduates, the 2003 budget specifies an increase no greater than 7 percent in academic years 2003-2004 and 2004-2005 at both four-year institutions and community colleges.

2005-2007 biennium: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority for Resident Undergraduates, other categories unlimited

For resident undergraduates, the 2007 budget specifies an increase of no greater than 7 percent for each year of the biennium at the research universities, 6 percent at the comprehensive institutions, and 5 percent at the community and technical colleges. As specified in the previous budget, institutions continue to have unlimited tuition-setting authority for all other student tuition categories through 2008-2009.

The table on the following page compares tuition increases for the past two years for each public four-year institution and for the community colleges.

Notes: Professional tuition rates vary at UW and WSU. The tables in Section IV show tuition rates for specific professional programs. The average community college resident tuition was authorized to increase 5 percent in 2005-06. Because community college tuition is now based entirely on credit-hour charges, for a student taking 15 credits per term, the increase was 5.7 percent in 2005-06.

Tuition Increases Over Time

Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fees have increased significantly since 1994-95, and have outpaced both Washington per capita personal income (PCPI) and inflation. The growth in the rate of inflation continues to lag behind both tuition and the PCPI.

Increases in Tuition Have Outpaced Per Capita Personal Income and Inflation

Sources: Higher Education Coordinating Board (tuition and fees); Office of the Forecast Council (2004 per capita personal income); and U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of Economic Analyses (IPD data).

The following tables show the changes in tuition and fees over the past decade for full-time undergraduate students. These tables reflect the total of tuition (operating and building fees) and the services and activities fee, plus the technology fee charged by some Washington institutions.

For the last several years, actual tuition and fees have varied slightly among Washington institutions within each category, i.e., research and comprehensive. The following tables display resident undergraduate tuition and fee increases for Washington institutions compared to national average increases.

Data Methods

All data contained in this report were compiled using Washington Higher Education Coordinating Board surveys of state agencies or individual institutions. HECB staff greatly appreciates the continued cooperation and assistance of survey respondents. Their efforts to provide accurate and timely data have helped make these reports source documents for many states as they develop their own tuition and fee analyses.

With each annual survey, respondents have an opportunity to review and revise previously reported data. Though small in number, such revisions modestly affect the national averages from those displayed in earlier reports. Revisions may reflect a mid-year surcharge, discontinuation of a nonresident differential, or an adjustment in incidental fees.

Data for the state colleges and universities in Tables 5 through 8 represent the average undergraduate charges at 214 state public institutions and the average graduate charges at 192 of those with graduate programs. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time at the same set of institutions offer consistency, and the large number of institutions included provides a close approximation to state averages. Washington institutions included in this average include Central Washington University, Eastern Washington University, and Western Washington University. Tuition and fee rates for The Evergreen State College are displayed in the Peer Institution Comparison section of the report.

For reporting comparability, the definition of “full-time undergraduate students” was based on 45 quarter hours or 30 semester hours, and the definition of “full-time graduate students” was based on 30 quarter hours or 20 semester hours. Tuition and required fees include total academic year tuition and required fees for full-time students. Optional fees, such as parking or health care, are not included unless they are paid by all full-time students.
